Following up from our meeting on October 17, 2012, the City has been continuing work on the design of the replacement of a 50-foot section of the Causeway Bridge. This small segment is immediately adjacent to the Island, basically after the railroad splits off. The initial plan was to close the Mare Island Causeway Bridge for public traffic during construction, with a relatively short construction period. The feedback from the Public Meeting held last fall indicated that construction duration was less of a concern than the bridge closure. After considering this feedback, the closure plan was modified to the greatest extent possible by constructing the bridge in multiple stages to minimize inconvenience to the Mare Island community. The current design calls for one-way traffic onto Mare Island over the Causeway and exiting Mare Island via Route 37 during Stage 1 of the construction activities. This phase is currently anticipated to last four to six months. Two-way traffic will be allowed on the Causeway with help of temporary signals for the remaining phases of the work, with some possible short term closures for construction safety. The emergency services response time will not be affected. The tentative schedule and bridge construction methodology will be presented in a Public Meeting scheduled for September 17 as noted above.
